

WRITING, WRITING EVERYWHERE

“Writing, writing everywhere” is a digital space for teaching, learning about and experimenting with writing. The writing-related resources, exercises, software tools and pedagogical reflections on this website are the outcomes of innovative teaching and research projects exploring how to foster good writing at tertiary level.

Here we share our ideas, joys and struggles as we seek to understand what writing is and what it could be, both within and beyond academe. Engaging and elegant writing can be found in many forms – scholarly essays, fictionalised research, computer code, reflective narratives – and this website embraces them all.

Whether you are an academic, a student or any other kind of writer, we hope you will take a look around and be encouraged to write more confidently, elegantly, passionately, productively, collaboratively... or simply more.

writing.auckland.ac.nz

Explore the resources

Read our blog

Ask important questions:

Know Your Writing* Software
by Evija Trofimova | Feb 21, 2018 | Uncategorized
It seems curious that so rarely we stop to reflect on the word processing software and other digital tools of writing we use every day, given how much work they do for us. Or how much work they do for our students. - I'm thinking of you, teachers of writing...

Academics Go Walking, Talking, Writing*
by Evija Trofimova | Dec 8, 2017 | Uncategorized * Feel free to borrow from our arrangements and experience to stage your own Walking, Talking, Writing event. We would be grateful if you made a reference to this site and passed on the link to it. - Part 1 - Motivation & desire to organize an event for researchers...

Tags
academic writing art writing computer coding conversations on writing creative creative/critical/collaborative creative productivity creative exercises
digital writing discipline-specific writing editing embodied writing indigenous methodologies innovation in teaching kaupapa Māori knowledge-creation literature

Watch videos on projects and events

"Weaving knowledge, weaving words" event

"Feeling the word" event

"Working title" event

2017 CLEAR Teaching and Learning Symposium

What does Maths have in common with Writing? (2017 Clear Fellow Caroline Yoon)

Take one coffee bean! Imaginative writing in scholarly inquiry (2017 Clear Fellow Esther Fitzpatrick)

Follow the creators on Twitter

Dr Evija Trofimova @evijat Centre for Learning & Research in Higher Education @aucklandCLear

Writing writing EVERYWHERE

For more information, please visit writing.auckland.ac.nz