

Boy? Or Girl?

Values of gender and health in Ethnic Communities in New Zealand

We are a research team based at the University of Auckland conducting a study on Gender Values and Health in Ethnic Communities

We are looking to interview abortion care providers – medical practitioners (GP/family planning doctors), nurses, counsellors or social workers – in public or private facilities in New Zealand.

For more information on our research, see our website <https://genderbiasresearch.auckland.ac.nz>

What does the study involve?

Participants will take part in a semi-structured interview regarding access and use of abortion care services among people from ethnic communities. Some of the topics we cover include:

- Abortion laws in New Zealand
- Access to abortion care services
- Gender inequity and abortion
- Socio-cultural values and abortion

The interview will not involve discussing or sharing personal information of any individual/s who might have used or considered using abortion services.

What will this study require of you?

- There will be one 45 minutes semi-structured face-to-face interview
- This can be conducted at a place and time that is suitable to you
