

Call for Papers

Join the Global Conversation on Climate Change and Indigenous Solutions

Did you present at the International Indigenous Climate Change Summit (IICCRS) 2023?

We are now inviting you to be part of our Special Issue for IICCRS23.

If you would like to submit a paper to be included (approx. 5,000 words) details for authors can be found on our website www.journal.mai.ac.nz

This Special Issue aims to capture the urgency and significance of the summit's themes while encouraging scholars to contribute their insights and research to the global discourse on climate change and Indigenous perspectives emphasising the pivotal-role of Indigenous voices, ideas, and actionable solutions in confronting the climate-crisis.

MAI Journal is inviting authors whose papers were presented at IICCRS to submit an article, due to be published online May 2024

Themes for Submission:

Theme I: Traditional Knowledges and Climate Change

Theme II: Indigenous Rights and Climate Justice

Theme III: Indigenous Led Climate Action

Theme IV: Collaborative Partnerships and Knowledge Sharing

Submission Guidelines:

- Papers should be original, unpublished work.
- Word limit: 5,000
- Submission deadline: 10th February 2024
- You must follow MAI Journal's formatting guidelines as shown on MAI Journal website

Submission Details: Submit your manuscripts online to our website above. Any further information email editors@journal.mai.ac.nz

MAI Journal is a journal of Ngā Pae o te Māramatanga (NPM), New Zealand's Māori Centre of Research Excellence (CoRE) which is a non-profit organisation funded by the Tertiary Education Commission (TEC) and hosted by The University of Auckland.

Join us in amplifying Indigenous voices in climate action!