Youth Actions for Anthropogenic Times Ignite Talk #1

The University of Melbourne, by A/Prof. Kathryn Coleman and Dr Sarah Heal
In Partnership with the Carbon mediators from Science Gallery Bengaluru

‘We would like to Acknowledge the Traditional Custodians of the lands around the world, and especially our hosts, the United Arab Emirates. We pay our deep respect to those who came before us, those who we meet today and those we hope to leave a future world to, that embraces and celebrates the deep connections to land, waters and sky. We walk together in peace and respect towards a united future’

With the whole bloody catastrophe laid out before us, at what point do we intervene?

CARBON

Today

My boyfriend lives 350 kilometres away from me.

12:50 pm ✓

He travels to Bangalore once a month. Well, we mostly text. We flirt online. In solitude.

12:51 pm ✓

Our butterflies of love are probably stored somewhere far away from both of us

12:52 pm ✓

In a data storage facility. Imagine the carbon footprint of that thing!

12:52 pm ✓

Our declarations of love, our fluttering butterflies, all digital, all heating up the earth.

12:52 pm ✓

Slowly. 12:52 pm ✓

Love is code bottled up, consuming energy.

12:53 pm ✓

Love is an exhaust pipe, constantly chugging out smoke, in search of the other

12:53 pm ✓
